Your Questions, Answered

What is this magazine?

AMBIDEXTROUS is a magazine that illuminates the people and processes involved in design. It is a cross-disciplinary, cross-market forum for the wider design community, including engineers, ethnographers, psychologists, and philosophers.

The editors of AMBIDEXTROUS are students, staff, alumni, and friends of Stanford University's myriad design programs.

What can I do to help?

Lots of things! First of all, you should subscribe to become a member of the AMBIDEXTROUS community and encourage others to do the same.
